BETWEEN TWO

■ A generation of young people has grown up with both the Arab and Jewish worlds. They are neither Arab nor Jewish, but they are both. They are the children of the future, the children of the present, the children of the past.

WORLDS

It is a time of great change, a time of great change. It is a time of great change, a time of great change. It is a time of great change, a time of great change. It is a time of great change, a time of great change.

It is a time of great change, a time of great change. It is a time of great change, a time of great change. It is a time of great change, a time of great change.

The display has many greenhouse, but there is no one to look there

Looking from the front, the display case seems to be a place for a lot of things. There are many things, but they are not all the same. Some are small, some are large. Some are old, some are new. Some are beautiful, some are ugly. Some are interesting, some are boring. Some are good, some are bad. Some are right, some are wrong. Some are true, some are false. Some are good, some are bad. Some are right, some are wrong. Some are true, some are false.

But the display case is not a place for a lot of things. It is a place for a few things. It is a place for a few things that are good, that are beautiful, that are interesting, that are true. It is a place for a few things that are good, that are beautiful, that are interesting, that are true.

At the end of the display case, there is a small table. On the table are some things. There are some things that are good, that are beautiful, that are interesting, that are true.

There's always must be that something is different in another world's yard? The money is in it. (1971)
